Hemerocallis

TWO SPECIES of Hemerocallis or Daylily have been widely known to gardeners for generations. Flava, the Lemon Lily, and Fulva Europa, the reddish orange Wayside Lily, were brought to this country by early settlers. In recent years great strides have been made in hybridizing, with amazing results, so that today it is possible to obtain a collection of Hemerocallis which will give a succession of bloom from Spring until Fall, with colors ranging from the most delicate pale yellow through orange, red, maroon tones and brown. There are also the most subtle and exquisite shades of peach, pink and rose. One of the outstanding characteristics of the Daylily is its extreme hardiness and sturdy habit of growth. No insect or disease has been known to injure it and any location suits it except extreme shade. When it is established it is hardy anywhere.

Naturalizing the Daylily

Gardeners are becoming increasingly interested in Daylilies as material for naturalizing since they lend themselves well to this type of planting. Their hardiness, attractive foliage and the fact that they require so little care, make it possible to use them effectively in locations unsuited to other perennials.

Hybrid Daylilies for this purpose can be supplied at $15.00 per hundred, fifty at the hundred rate, express collect. Varieties of our selection will be sent, properly labelled.

Planting Suggestions

The soil should be thoroughly pulverized and a hole dug large enough to comfortably accommodate all the plant roots without crowding them and allow every one to extend to its full length and natural position. A little well pulverized old manure and high grade commercial fertilizer should be thoroughly mixed with the loosened soil at the bottom of the hole. With the plant in place, its roots properly extended, hold it steady at the depth it grew in the nursery (bleached part of stem should be underground) while enough soil is placed around it to fill the remaining space to the ground level. Press soil around the plant firmly, thoroughly saturate with water and fill in with dry dirt. Plants should be watered frequently and the soil lightly worked when it becomes dry until the plant is well established.

The big difference between the Daylily and the average perennial is that the Daylily is far hardier and requires much less attention, for after it has been given a good start it takes care of itself. Daylilies are, of course, not indestructible and while they will grow in poor soil with no care, they repay the gardener for good food and water by giving an abundance of beautiful flowers and more luxuriant growth.
